Post Graduate and Research Department of Economics

appreciated the initiative to celebrate the significant day in the college and expressed the wish that it shall continue for the years to come.

The chief guest Dr. Subash started by reminiscing how he was once a part of an economics magazine named “Oikonomikos”. He stressed how economics is an inherent and important part of our daily lives. In his lecture accompanied by a Powerpoint presentation, he analysed the impact of Covid-19 pandemic on Micro Small Medium Enterprises in detail by sharing his research findings and experiences. He highlighted how some industries like food related ones have seen an uptick in their business during the pandemic. He also threw light on the latest trend of video résumés while speaking about the need to be well-equipped for the job market.

Following the inauguration, seven competitions namely Mr. and Ms. Oikonomikos, Shark Tank, IPL auction, debate, quiz, poster making and blog writing were conducted. The judges were honoured with gifts and the winners of the events were appreciated with certificates and trophies.

13. Outcome of the Programme:

The guest lecture offered insights into the role of economics in our day-to-day lives and the opportunities for businesses during the pandemic. The presentation enhanced the understanding of the concepts discussed. The events provided a suitable stage for the students to exhibit and hone a wide range of talents like efficient communication and outside-the-box thinking.

The welcome address made it clear on how photographs invoke emotion, and how they are seen both in life, as well as photography. the Presidential address was delivered by the Head of the Visual Communication Department, Ms. Vasanth Gopal, who spoke briefly on how the competition was initiated. Winners were announced. The prizes for the Inter Collegiate level competition are as follows: 1st place:

Sc Visual Communication) The winners and runners were then showered with a gracious round of applause. Following the prize distribution, a glimpse of the overall event was projected in the auditorium, where the extraordinary photographs taken by the various participants were displayed. The Chief Guest provided his key-note address after this, where he begun by sharing his experience as a photographer so far. He then displayed his work, which was presented as a series of photographs which conveyed a story, from start to end. His initial photography series, named “Roots of Water”, covered the Narmada water crisis which was displayed in an immersive monochromatic experience, which took us deep into the social crisis, and gave us an insight on the lifestyle and living conditions of the indigenous people. Followed by a quick Q&A on the first presentation, he moved on to the next series, named “I feel like a Fish.” This series showcased the strenuous and harsh working conditions of the manual laborer’s involved in the process of extracting salt. The workers portrayed here involved a lot of women and aged people, breaking the stereotypes regarding hefty labour. Finally, he screened a short video titled “In My Dreams” which consisted of his exquisite work throughout the course of his journey. He then screened his Bollywood film photography work of which he had also been a part of. After speaking about his overall experience, styles, and his journey, a Q&A session was held with an interesting exchange between the students and the guest. With that, the event moved on to the Vote of Thanks, where the chief guest, the management, principal, staff, organizing committee and students were thanked for their involvement.
